SIDEWALK PETITION TO BE HEARD IN COUNCIL

Effort to be Made for McKean Avenue
Improvement

PAPER LARGELY SIGNED

Originated in Business Men's Association—Up to Pennsylvania Railroad

When the borough council meets tonight in its monthly session it will take action on the proposition of securing a sidewalk along the property of the Pennsylvania Railroad company from Fifth street to between Third and Fourth street. A petition will be presented well signed by property holders and business men who own property or conduct business places on McKean avenue between these two streets. If a sidewalk were laid the expense would be upon the railroad company, as property owners.

First mention of the proposal to get the sidewalk laid, if possible was made at a recent meeting of the Charleroi Business Men's Association. A committee was appointed and it is this committee that has been circulating the petition.

It is asserted that the railroad property is unsightly and during bad weather muddy and continually in bad condition. What action the railroad will take in the matter if council presents a properly attested request remains to be seen. However, the railroad has shown a disposition to cooperate with Charleroi in matters of improvement on previous occasions.

BURNS ARE FATAL TO AGED WOMAN AT MONONGAHELA

As the result of burns sustained in a fall on a stove about three weeks ago, Sarah Catherine Tidball, aged 80 years, died this morning at stable Robert L. Tidball at Monongahela. Mrs. Tidball was working about the stove in her kitchen when she was seized with a fainting spell and fell backward on the stove being seriously burned. Her funeral will be held Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock with services private and interment in the Monongahela cemetery.

Hundreds of women nowadays are entering the professions or business world and go to work day after day in bad health, afflicted with some female ailment, dragging one foot wearily after the other, working with an eye on the clock and wishing for closing time to come.

Women in this condition should take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs. It has brought health and happiness to more women in America than any other remedy. Give it a trial.

Gives Bond; Disappears

Belle Vernon Man Accused of Changing Checks Gets Away After Hearing

After he had been given a preliminary hearing on the charge of changing checks on a coal car at Somers No. 4 mine of the Pittsburgh Coal company at Pricedale, and had furnished $100 bail through a friend for his appearance at court, Marcella Biagini of Belle Vernon suddenly disappeared Monday night. Today his bondsman, Dinetra Dolfi was looking for him. Information was lodged by John Logan and Thomas Mailpass after it is stated Biagini had been seen changing checks.

IMPORTANT WORK DONE BY COURT

Among Chief Matters is Postponement of Rush Sentence

PLEADERS SENTENCED

In addition to addressing the grand jury and hearing the quarterly returns of the constables, Judge Robert W. Irwin had a rather busy day Monday as a number of pleaders were before him for sentence. James W. Rush who was convicted at the November term for manslaughter for the killing of Charles Rogge at Millboro October 15, was to appear and receive sentence, but this was postponed until next Monday. Tony Bolleto of Daisytown, a young foreigner charged with getting drunk and attempting to shoot up the community, pleaded guilty to carrying a concealed weapon. In sentencing him to pay a fine of $1 and costs and serve six months in the workhouse, Judge Irwin said that the court could not deal with such cases lightly.

James Story of Monongahela pleaded guilty to stealing a keg of beer in buggy. Incidentally he also drove away with the rig in order to convey the beer to a place of safety. He was given $1 and costs and three months in jail.

William Braxton of Monongahela, a colored trusty, who escaped from the Washington jail after he had served 35 days of a four months sentence, pleaded guilty to the charge of escape and got four months more in jail, together with the costs and a fine of $1.

Harry Jobes, 17 years old of California, pleaded guilty to the charge of burglary and larceny and was committed to the Huntington Reformatory.

JUDGE IRWIN GIVES CONSTABLES ADVICE CONCERNING WORK

Tells Them If They Suspect Violations to Report Matter to District Attorney as Manner of Securing Action

In receiving the constables quarterly returns at court Monday, Judge Robert W. Irwin took occasion to impress upon those officials that they should not leave violators of the law against whom they have no evidence to proceed unrestricted, but must consult the district attorney, who will either co-operate or instruct the officials what to do. Merely learning of the existence of the violations and reporting them to court is not a fulfillment of duty. Judge Irwin said.

"In going over the returns I have observed that some of the constables had made returns of offense against public morals. It is your duty, as constables where you have a knowledge of the existence, for instance, of a speakeasy and that it was the duty of the constable, in that district a gambling house, a speakeasy or if he knew of this place to have where liquor is being sold in violation pressed it at once and save one hour of the law, or any other crime affecting man life."

Pretty Girl Member of Stock Company Embarrassed From Real Cause

ACT NOT ON THE BILLS STATE POLICE GET HER

Recently the Columbia Stock company played an engagement at Fayette City and went away with a brown taste in the mouth of some of the members, and left behind a chuckling population.

Like most stock companies, the Columbia plays very serious dramas—any drama would be serious played by a stock company in Fayette City. The one where the something happened was one of their best, and the most conspicuous personage in it was a pretty, petite actress, who let it be mentioned wouldn't know a Little Egypt dance from a bean bag game at a church social. The villain was persistently pursuing the young woman and it seemed to the audience it was about time for the hero to get busy and rescue her when the dreadful something happened that made the pretty young woman blast clear through four layers of complexion, made women in the audience glance hastily at their programs and that part of the audience which would have been in the gallery had the opera house boasted a gallery, ungallantly tittered.

The trouble was that the prettily young woman tripping so merrily about the stage, suddenly missed half her clothes, revealing her form and plenty of hose. Her skirt fastenings simply gave up the ghost and the inevitable followed. Her skirt dropped to the floor. She had neglected to put on an underskirt and there she stood, wishing painfully she was elsewhere. The footlights glared miserably at her birthday attire, which she couldn't help. It was an embarrassing situation.

After the audience had gasped and grinned, it became aware that she wasn't in the spotlight any more, but had skipped. Shortly she reappeared with stronger skirt supports—yes, and her skirt—and the play continued.

Police Work Is Changed

First List of Applicants Are Heard on Monday

Patrolmen Murphy Goes On Hill For Month—Brickner And Cor Down Town

Specific Objections Lacking in Certain Cases—General Remonstrances Made

With the first of this month changes were made effective in the hours of police work in Charleroi. Patrolman James Murphy will have this month the hill section for patrol, his hours of duty being from 5 p. m. until 5 a. m. Patrolman Gus Brickner will have the down town time from 12 noon until 12 midnight and Patrolman George Corey will have from 5 o'clock afternoon until 5 a. m. in the down town section. Next month there will be other definite changes made according to the system of alternating made effective by Burgess S. L. Woodward.

Charleroi was largely represented at license court at Washington Monday where four of the Charleroi applicants against whom general remonstrances were filed had their hearing after those against whom no remonstrances had been filed were passed upon by the court. Three of the Charleroi retail applicants against whom special charges have been preferred, were scheduled for a hearing today. These are W. H. Coles of The Wilbur, W. H. Zellers of the Hotel Charleroi and Geo. M. Fellows of the Hotel Myford. Charges are also preferred against the Independent Brewing company at Charleroi.

The Charleroi applicants against whom general remonstrances had been filed were A. W. Day, Hotel Arthur; W. R. Gaut, Hotel Walfred; Geo. Rylands, Hotel Wellington; Geo. L. West, Hotel Monier. Before these hearings were taken up Attorneys Moore and Judson, who represent the temperance forces asked permission to file special charges, stating that evidence of specific violations had just come to their notice. The attorneys for the applicants objected and the court ruled that additional evidence would not be permitted, as sufficient time had been given to prepare and file all charges. Judge McIlvaine stated that he would go on with the hearings, and that if the temperance people had any additional evidence against the Charleroi applicants he would hear it later with a view of revoking the present license if the charges have sufficient backing.

So great was the crowd when license court opened that the doors of the court room had to be closed. Thirty members of the W. C. T. U. occupied seats back of the counsel for the temperance forces, and church bells were rung when court adjourned at 12:30, when the temperance forces were supposed to bow their heads in prayer. The business of hearing the applicants against whom there were no remonstrances proceeded expeditiously and in 20 minutes 29 applicants had been handed up and passed over to the clerk.

The first snag was struck when the case of J. E. Turner, seeking a retail license in Stockdale, came up. Turner bought the license formerly held by Cornelius O'Shea and as soon as the temperance forces found Turner was after the license they filed objections which were recognized by the court. It was claimed Turner is not a fit person to hold a license. The court set Saturday for a full hearing on his application.

Chief interest centered in the application of the Acme Brewing company in Bentleville, against which remonstrances have been filed. In connection with this application a "sociological department," such as is maintained in Ellsworth and Cokeburg, was described. Everything will be sold cheap. Inquiry 608 Lookout avenue. 158-261-p

Scene 1. Early morning in young woman's boudoir. The young woman is inspecting an expensive white suit. "This suit needs cleaning. I'll just call up the cleaners and have them call for it." Places bundle by the door.

Scene 2. Same morning in relative's room in same house. Relative is inspecting a white and black suit.

"I believe I'll have this suit dyed black." She calls a cleaning establishment operated by a man whose last name is the same as the name of the men who keep the shop where the young woman intends to send her suit.

Scene 3. Wagon stops in front of house and driver rings doorbell.

"Package for —" he asks, and the maid, seeing the bundle left near the door by the young woman, hands the driver the package. The package goes to the establishment, which has orders to dye a suit black.

Scotch Sabbath Morality.

Even in Scotland up to the middle of the eighteenth century Sabbath morality was geographical. Sabbath according to a contemporary writer never "got above the pass of Killiecrankie." For generations after the reformation the highlander on Sunday drove his cattle to market, brought home his fuel, baked his bread, fished, played shinty, and put the stone. Sunday christenings and penny weddings were common, and the presbytery books merely sent warnings against piping, fiddling and dancing at them.

But in the lowlands the church took a sterner view. The assembly forbade shippers and sailors to begin any voyage on the Lord's day or to "loose any ships, barks or boats." Aberdonians were fined if they failed to attend worship, the good man and good wife of the house contravening paid 6s. scd. and "ilk servant 2s. Scots." a sore burden to be borne in the seventeenth century. The record of absenteers is scanty.—London Chronicle.

The Poetic Tenynsons.

No other family has within two generations produced so many poets as the Tenynsons. All the laureate's brothers wrote poems, and both his sons published verses in Macmillan's Magazine, though they did so anonymously. "It is a curious fact," wrote Alexander Japp in 1902, "that the Tenynson family, every male member of which wrote verse, and successfully, should have so far abstained from publishing openly or publishing at all, as if they disliked the idea of coming into competition with the great poet. Specimens of the work of Lionel and Hallam Tenynson will be found in Poets and Poetry of the Century, and I may add that these pieces were sent to me by the old poet himself in a letter now before me, with such words as most certainly show that he did not share the feeling of Scott—thank God that his sons showed no poetic symptoms."

A Model Child.

George III. was such a thrifty king that we cannot doubt that he begged the little chap, of whom Thackeray tells this delightful story, and longed to knight him on the spot.

One day, when the king and queen were walking together, probably at Kew, they met a little boy—they were always fond of children, the good folks—and patted the little towhead.

"Whose little boy are you?" asked the king.

"I am the king's beef eater's little boy," replied the child.

On which the king said, "Then kneel down and kiss the queen's hand."

But the innocent offspring of the beef eater declined this treat.

"No," said he; "I won't kneel, for if I do I shall spoil my new breeches."—Youth's Companion.

Didn't Miss a Dose.

Old lady looking contentedly out of window on road train, interested passengers excited by ringing of what sounds like an electric bell. Old lady calmly opens up grip and shuts off an alarm clock which had begun to ring. Takes bottle of medicine from pocket and drinks spoonful. Readjusts clock, closes grip and again looks out of window, remarking casually to her neighbor: "Best little reminder that I know of. I have to take my medicine every two hours, so I carry that alarm clock with me, the alarm set so that it will ring when medicine time comes around."—New York Tribune.

Do not give way to fretfulness. It takes the fragrance out of life.

Fallibility of the Eyewitness.
When Professor F. C. Dockery, in the psychological department of the University of Kansas, got into an alteration one day with the janitor, who entered the classroom and insisted on sweeping while Dockery was lecturing, a number of students rushed to his rescue. The adult grew into a free for all fight, during which the janitor, who had drawn a revolver, was overpowered and disarmed. As a burly student grasped the pistol a shot was fired. As soon as order was somewhat restored the frightened and fleeing students reassembled and accounts were taken from them of the affair. All the students swore they had heard the shot, and several told of seeing the smoke from the revolver. Then Professor Dockery told them it was an experiment, a fight had been planned carefully, and the shot of the revolver was from the outside of the building by a student posted there. The purpose of the experiment was to show the unreliability of information even when furnished by an eyewitness.

Car Free Voyaging on Small Wood Burning Steamboats.

A trip by steamboat on the Congo river has its lazily sunning attractions as you descend from Stanleyville to the railway at Léopoldville, a voyage of twelve days. The boats, small stern wheel affairs, carry from twenty to thirty cubic passengers each. On the lower deck are the pack mules, sometimes in a sitting crowd, sprawling over the cargo. Most of the captains are Swedes, Russians or Germans, and the engineers are picked up in Sierra Leone. Two companies run boats, and several of the mission stations have steamboats of their own besides.

Some of the boats have small dining rooms; others set the tables on deck, protected from the sun by awnings. The food is not luxurious, and very little fresh meat is to be had. The fuel is wood, and every six or six hours the boat must stop to replenish the supply from a heap of cut sticks on the bank. These piles of wood are made by natives or by scattered traders, often where no habitation is near, and in such cases the captain pays for the wood by putting money in a box that the trusting woodman has provided for the purpose.

Every boat carries a drum, and as it approaches an inhabited district the drum beats to tell the natives that goats, fruit or vegetables are wanted.

Every night the steamer ties up against the bank, and all the black passengers go to sleep on shore. But they devote most of the night to merrymaking and keep those on the boat as wide awake as themselves.—Youth's Companion.

SAVED BY A CAMERA.

A Photographer's Narrow Escape From an Encaged Orang.

As a rule, orang outangs are caught young and tamed before they are shipped to Europe. Mr. W. P. Dando tells in "Wild Animals and Curmers" of such an animal that arrived in London with the best of characters. He was considered a docile, steady going old thing and Mr. Dando was engaged to photograph him.

I entered the orang's cage as I had entered scores of others. I had not exposed many plates before I saw that the animal was intent on mischief. He was a very powerful beast, and I should have stood no chance at all if he had attacked me.

My only chance was to use the camera as a weapon. Making a sign to the keeper to keep silent, I pointed my hand camera at the orang and with slow and steady step approached him. The keeper was outside the door, ready to open it, but neither of us uttered a sound. I was relieved to see the orang retreat gradually and at the same time slowly rise from the crouched and menacing position he had taken. Once he was on the move, I knew I had a chance. I succeeded in working him round to the corner furthest from the door, which the keeper did silently and slowly opened.

Still pointing my camera at the orang, I very, very slowly backed out of the cage, the door was slammed to, and I was safe. Even when I was partly through the door opening any quick movement on my part would have been a fatal mistake. The animal could have reached me in an instant.

Bargain Hunting.
An amusing story is told in connection with the early days of Sir J. B. Robinson, the South African millionaire. He was crossing the Vaal river in 1869, looking for diamonds. He asked the natives if they had seen any "pretty stones," and at last he found a man who had a diamond. It was a small stone, and the prospector offered him $10 for it, but he refused to part with it. He increased his offer to $12, but still the man refused.

"What will you take for it?" he was asked.

"Twenty goats," was the firm reply: "nothing less."

"I sent off to the nearest farm," says Sir J. B. Robinson in telling the story, "and bought twenty goats for £10. and so got possession of my first diamond."—London Globe.

Well Posted.

The old man who acts as postmaster in a small southern town likewise keeps a general merchant's shop. He is often accused of reading the post cards that pass through his hands, but this he strongly denies. A lady called at the shop and ordered, among other goods, a ham and a cheese. Two days later the lady called again and asked why these two articles had not been sent with the other goods. "Oh," replied the merchant calmly, "I saw by the postcard you got yesterday that yo' friends wasn't comin' so I natchly thought yo' wouldn't need them things."—Argonaut.

Difficult State of Mind.

"We're all fretted up," remarked Three Fingered Sam, "since Bruce Bok got engaged to the schoolma'am."

"I should think a tender sentiment would improve his disposition."

"His disposition is improved, but it's uncertain. If you don't brag about what a party gal the schoolma'am is, he feels disappointed, and if you brag too much he gets jealous."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Giving Him Room.
"The orchestra is too crowded."
"They will have to sit tight."
"But the trombone player hasn't room to work his slide."

LICENSE COURT WORK AT WASHINGTON

finest as a department which looks after the ordering of beer for men employed in the mines.

Charges had been made against the Moose Brewing company at Roscoe, that its agents were selling at Ellsworth and Cokeburg. Remonstrances had been filed, but the court took them as no weight. In the special charges complaints were made that there was disorder and profane language about the brewery, and one witness testified that he had seen the brewmaster throw two buckets of malt on a woman and turn a hose up.

The application of Samuel Thomas for a retail license at Roscoe was passed up without any testimony being taken. A remonstrance was filed against him but no charges.

E. E. Bach, sociological secretary for the Ellsworth Colliers company, was referred to several times, but was not called to the stand. It was brought out that it is the custom of the company to maintain this department to keep a check on the amount of drinking done by the men, it being shown that any employee desiring drink must get it by filing his order and depositing his money with the department.

After much evidence had been heard the court remarked there was no violation of the law in a coal company establishing a department to restrict drinking and superintending the buying of drink. The court declined to hear any evidence on personal remonstrances filed against the Crescent Brewing company of Washington, and these remonstrances and the application were ordered filed. The big fight is expected when several applications, bitterly opposed, will come up.

WHEN YOU'RE SICK YOUR WAGES STOP

You know what that means—misery—worry—big bills—debt!

You know you can't afford to get sick. Keeping in good health means food and clothing for you and your family. It is up to you to take care of yourself. It is up to you, whenever you don't feel right, to take something to make you right, to strengthen you, build you up, ward off worse sickness—protect you and your family. That thing we have is Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. In offering it to you, we protect you against money risk, by personally promising you that, if it does not restore your health we will give back your money without word or question. We believe it is the best builder of health, energy and strength you can get. It is helping many of your neighbors. If it don't help you, we will give back your money.

Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion is composed principally of pure Olive Oil and the Hypophosphites. Each has long been endorsed by successful physicians. Here they are for the first time combined. The result is a remarkable nerve, blood and strength-building remedy that is both food and medicine. For all who are nervous run down and debilitated—no matter what the cause: for old people; for convalescents; for puny children, we know of nothing that will give health and strength as quickly as Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. It is a real builder of good blood, strong muscles, good digestion. Pleasant to take, it contains no alcohol or habit-forming drugs. If you don't feel well, economize both money and strength by beginning today to take Rexall Olive Oil Emulsion. Cold only at the Rexall Stores, and in this town only by us. $1.00. Carroll's Drug Store, 623 Fallowfield avenue, Charleroi, Pa.

IMPORTANT WORK

DONE BY COURT

Ray Hawkins and John Kitchens, two young men, who were picked up at Cononburg each with a revolver in a holster, admitted the charge and were sentenced to pay a fine of $1 and costs and serve 30 days in jail.

J. F. Caldwell, a Washington druggist, who pleaded guilty to selling liquor illegally, was directed to pay the costs, a fine of $50 and serve three months in jail. This makes the fourth Washington druggist now serving time in the county jail.

The bill against Joseph Noroski of Donora, charged with illegal voting was ignored and the costs put on the prosecutor, F. W. James.

HUMAN BROTHERHOOD.

When Disaster Came All Were Kin and Equality Reigned.

Friends who went through the horrors of the San Francisco earthquake in 1906 and kept their spiritual senses alert tell me that its most poignant experience was not one of horror or of pity, but of the almost miraculous attainment of human brotherhood.

"Just after the disaster, when rich and poor waited in line together for their allowance of bread and milk, I saw," says a friend, "a rich woman from the St. Francis hotel lying asleep on a doorstep with her head on a mat. A long coat was thrown over her, and under one corner of it a young Japanese boy, a perfect stranger to her, was curled up asleep."

"Everybody was everybody's friend and, though we were all dog tired, there was not a word of complaint or ill nature. To bivouac together in the park and care for each other's babies around fires of driftwood gathered on the beach transformed men and women into defenseless children of the earth, revealed each to each by their innate loveliness."

"Common danger and mutual helpfulness, common misfortune, common work, common confrontation with the elements brought a swift achievement of almost ideal brotherhood. A rushing blow made all the world for a time kin."—Atlantic Monthly.

TAKING A PHOTOGRAPH.

So Easy Nowadays That It Positively Peased the Old Timer.

"I'm in an organization where the members are expected to furnish the secretary with photographs of themselves."

"Yes?"

"Well, I hadn't been to a photographer for twenty years. I hated to go. I remembered the old head clamp and the twisted spine and the awkward hands and the depressed chin, and the silly smile. It seemed to me worse than the dentist's. But I had to go. I walked into the photographer's big room like a Christian martyr, and the operator pointed out a chair, and I sat down, and he said, 'That's all.' I ask him to repeat it. He did. Then I got out of the chair and went back to my office."

"Well?"

"Well, I don't feel right about it. It didn't seem to me worth while. I don't think the photographer treated me right. It looked to me as if he had a disagreeable job on his hands and wanted to shirk it. He should have fussed over me more. What do I know about posing? Besides, there wasn't time. That's all," he said, and slipped me out of the chair. They didn't snub me that way twenty years ago, no sir!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Made the Most of His Hats.

When Lord Milner held his first reception at Pretoria the officers and legislators were given to understand that stock coats and tall hats were expected of them. There was only one shop in the place in which silk hats were sold, and this had but four of them. The Transvaal legislators rushed off in a body to buy these four, but the barter, not being mad, saw his opportunity in their extremity. He knew there was no time to get hats from anywhere else, so he resolved not to sell. He offered to let them out on hire at the rate of 10 shillings for ten minutes. His shop was close at hand. Four gentlemen could present themselves before his excellency. After ten minutes they must silently steal away and hand over their hired finery to another panting quartet. It was done, and the barter still repeats dreamily as he recalls the moment of his life. "It would not have been fair to have sold them, not fair to my customers and not fair to myself."—London Globe.

"The Corsican Bandit."

Only those who have traveled a good deal in Italy can realize the depth of the resentment that is still felt there at the losses the country suffered through the "Corsican Bandit" as Napoleon has been dubbed. The Italians have a saying about the French: "Are the French thievers?" "No, but bona parte is a good part of them are." And when a visitor goes to one city after another, sees one building after another that was robbed of its chief treasures by Napoleon, he begins to understand this savage sentiment. It is even stronger in Malta, which island was virtually swept clean of its splendors of medieval and renaissance art by the conqueror. The Maltese foot is at somewhere at the bottom of Alexan- dria bay, the ship on which Napoleon loaded it having founders there.

Wat Tyler's Rebellion.

Attempts to fix by statute the wages of agricultural laborers in England were largely responsible for the great revolt of 1381, or "Wat Tyler's rebellion." It represented the despairing effort of landowners to get back to the level of wages before the black death came to make labor dear. But the lord of the manor overshot the mark. He wanted the day wage kept down to 4 cents in 6 cents a day. Had he put 6 cents to 8 cents in the schedule there might have been no rebellion.

Baddy Expressed.

Mother-in-law—it is so kind of you Joseph, to take the trouble to drive me home! Son-in-law—Don't mention it! It's no trouble at all. I'm the contrary. It is the most delightful drive I have had for some time!—London Telegraph.

The wise prove and the foolish confess by their conduct that a life of employment is the only life worth leading.—William Paley.

RIGHT UNDER OLD SOL.

They Were in Blazing Sunlight, Yet Cast No Shadow.

Every one knows that when a person stands in the full sunlight his body casts a shadow which will be either short or long, according as the sun is high in the heavens or near the horizon at sunrise or sunset. A little thought will bring it home to the reader that, obviously, if the sun is exactly vertical over a person's head, there can be no shadow.

But the problem is to determine when and where this shall be the state of things. As regards the "where," that must evidently be at some place on the earth in the tropics, and the "when" must be the hour of midday. To get these two things to occur by arrangement is a matter of no small difficulty.

But as a matter of fact they did concur on a day in February, 1913—namely, the 13th, when a scientist, W. E. Gibbs, was in midocean in latitude 15 degrees south, the sun's declination being also about 15 degrees south. A photo, reproduced in the London Strand, represents Gibbs and another man standing bolt upright on the deck facing one another, and clearly shows the absence of any sign of a lateral shadow—in other words, it proves that the ship was in such a latitude that the sun was vertically overhead and that the time was noon, when the sun was at its highest altitude as between east and west.—Exchange

SAVE YOUR APPENDIX.

This Mysterious Organ May Prove to Be a Valuable Gland.

The appendix is not a useless organ undergoing degeneration, as has been hitherto supposed, but is a valuable gland, and persons should think twice before having it removed. This is a part of a report presented to the French Academy of Sciences by Dr. Perrier.

Another well known French scientist, the late Dr. Lucas-Championnere, warned the medical world some years ago that the appendix probably was undeserving of present day contempt, yet he was unable to establish the possible function of this small and mysterious organ.

Dr. Perrier's report is based upon studies made by Dr. Robinson. The latter collected the mucous secretions from a large number of appendices removed at the hospitals and prepared a serum which, on being injected into animals, was found to stimulate the contractile movements of the intestines. Dr. Robinson, therefore, was convinced that the appendix cannot be cut out without seriously interfering with intestinal action, although he recognizes the necessity of operating when the gland is gangrenous or otherwise diseased.—Paris Cor. New York Sun.

Making a Present.

Lady Jersey was in her time one of the leaders of fashion, and her house was the resort of politicians and others. With her lived her daughter, Lady Clementine Villiers, a handsome and clever girl. The custom had been established that all friends should give the latter a present on her birthday, and these presents were set out in an antechamber. Among these friends was Lord Brougham, then an old man. He called on a birthday, but had forgotten what the occasion was, and had brought no present. Seeing a mass of presents laid out, he seized one of them and took it in as his present, tightly counting that the young lady would not remember that it was one that already had been given to her. And very proud he was of his present of mind. But, then, he was an ex-lord chancellor.—London Truth.

Occult Information.

A. Henry Savage Landor may deny on geological grounds the existence of any "lost Atlantis," but there are among the theosophical and other occult fraternities people who will cheerfully draw you a map of the vanished land and give you a description of its people, their manners and customs. The information is obtained by various mystical methods—"revelations," clairvoyance, etc. Some years ago it was discovered by similar "occult" means that at the north pole itself the temperature was
